

SOCIETY

SUMMER for this year at least, is a closed book, and autumn has begun. The town is actually beginning to fill up, and the big residences in the fashionable districts will all be opened up in another week or so, and society will then begin plans for the winter campaign. There will be numerous additions to the society set here in the way of brides from other titles and debutantes that hitherto have been present at only the most informal of functions, and most of those given by members of the same. Each succeeding year brings a big wave of pretty girls to adorn the shores of society and incidentally to dance at the balls and attend all the big functions that round up the social calendar for a season. Last winter proved one of the most brilliant seasons that Richmond has seen in many years, and the width and breadth of society was tested on many occasions, when prominent society women entertained the same set on exactly the same evening, at probably the same hour. The cotillions and gowns have grown to be very formal affairs, and the fashionable world is looking forward to a crowded calendar during the coming fall and winter, with a long list of handsome functions and brilliant balls to amuse those who come and go.

Baltimore Wedding.

Among the smart October weddings will be that of Miss Letta Symington Goode, daughter of Mrs. Letta Symington Goode, and Robert Edward Lee Taylor, of Norfolk, which will be celebrated in Baltimore. Mrs. Goode and her daughters have been spending the summer at Biddeford Pool, Maine.

Concerning Mrs. DeFord.

A Richmond exchange contains the following of interest to Virginia society:

"Mrs. Thomas DeFord is one of the most prominent of the young hostesses, and is one of the leaders in the Green Spring Valley, where Mr. and Mrs. DeFord have for years occupied Oakdene, the country place belonging to William B. Ogden, who has been living abroad for the last ten years. Mrs. DeFord was formerly Miss Beulah Smith, and is the only daughter of Mrs. Pembroke Mitchell Womble. Her beauty is of the decided brunette type, and she has much vivacity and charm of manner. She is noted for her exquisite taste in dress, and always wears the smartest costumes. Mrs. DeFord, like her husband, who recently resigned the mastership of the Elkridge Hounds, is devoted to out-of-door sports, and has been at the races each day of this meet. Besides their place in the Green Spring Valley, and a town house at 215 North Charles Street, Mr. and Mrs. DeFord have a delightful cottage at Luray, in Virginia, where they spend part of every year, and where they entertain a succession of house parties for the winter and summer."
